

Institute of Archaeology - Summer School in Archaeology & Social Sciences

@ Viminacium

24-28 July 2023

Call for Participants

Lectures and workshops of the Summer School explore the main core themes:

- Approach to interdisciplinary researches and collaboration between Archaeology and Social Sciences
- Modern theories and methodologies in Archeology and Social Sciences
- Utilization and value of contemporary Archeological research

Who can apply?

Students 19+ who are currently enrolled in BA, MA or PhD programs, based in Europe, in the following fields: ethnology, cultural anthropology, archaeology, architecture, applied arts, visual arts, history of art, history, management in culture, interdisciplinary studies, culture studies or any other field of social sciences and arts.

The Summer School will be held in English, which means that all participants should be fluent in this language.

Where is the summer school taking place?

The Summer School will be held in Viminacium Archaeological Park in eastern Serbia. Viminacium was a military camp and major city (provincial capital) of the Roman province of Moesia Superior. Nowadays, this archaeological park is center of many archaeological, educational and cultural events. Its value and uniqueness is t also by relevant international institutions.

To find out more, check the following website <http://viminacium.org.rs/en/viminacium/>.

Why should you apply?

- You want to understand and include interdisciplinary approach to your current or future studies
- You want to spend part of summer learning from the best regional and international social science professors and scholars from fields of archaeology and visual arts
- You want to improve your academic, speaking and critical thinking skills
- You aim to gain some important academic contacts and possibly begin collaborating on different projects with students and experts
- Want to take advantage of the opportunity to be a part of interactive archaeological workshops at Viminacium Archaeological Park with capability of practical learning
- Opportunities to exchange ideas and experiences with experts from diverse backgrounds in a dynamic socio-cultural context

How to apply?

To apply, please provide:
